

HERE'S SCHOOL OF THIEVERY

GIRLS LEARNED THE TRICKS AND LEFT HOME.

Salome Dancing and Other New Things Besides Shopping Taught by Man and Woman in a Flat on 34th Street and a Boy Arrested After 3 Months of It.

Two girls, 16 and 14 years old, were turned over to the Children's society in the Jefferson Market court yesterday after telling a story of a man and a woman who in a room on the upper East Side teach young girls and boys the fine points of shoplifting.

The girls are large for their age, nearly 20 in appearance. Their stealing has not been their first. They are shabbily dressed. As the girls sobbed on one side of the children's room their mothers on the other side watched them with pity.

Mary Pokorney, of 1131 First avenue, one of the girls, worked in a button factory. A woman came to work in the same place and became intimate with Mary. She invited the girl to her home and told her that she had a lot of money to spend that she had and enjoyed them. They talked and companionship were fascinating to the ignorant girl. Soon she told her friend, Mary Schindler, of 325 Seventh street, of her experiences and took her to the house that she might share in this new life.

After a few nights of gaiety the two girls were told how they might get money for themselves. The woman brought out a large chain and showed them how to pick a pocket. She told them that she had a pocket which would hold many articles. Then she put knives and forks on the edge of the dining room table and taught the girls how to slide them into the pocket without attracting attention. That was three months ago. The two girls left the places where they had worked and began to frequent the shopping districts together.

At night, telling their mothers they were going to the theatre or to see moving pictures, they went up to the woman's house. They did not always practice ways of shoplifting. There were other ways of entertaining them until late in the night. They told how Mary Schindler danced a Salome dance one time.

The fascination of doing wrong was too much for Mary Pokorney after that. She met a young fellow at the moving pictures one night. He was William Roseland, 19 years old, of 349 East Sixty-seventh street.

On the night of February 5, Roseland called at Mary Pokorney's home. Her mother went out to see what Roseland wanted. Mary Pokorney, who was alone, stayed in her room. She had a bag of clothes in her room and a bag of clothes in her room. She had a bag of clothes in her room and a bag of clothes in her room.

Then they went to 46 East Seventy-eighth street and stayed in a room. They had a bag of clothes in their room. They had a bag of clothes in their room. They had a bag of clothes in their room. They had a bag of clothes in their room.

TWO COPS FIGHT.

Some Say Brady Ticked O'Connell's Feet in a Dreaming Bronx Station House.

The Wakefield police station in the furthest Bronx usually is a somnolent place. That is why the inmates of this station house got so mad yesterday morning when Patrolman Hugh Brady and Patrolman Richard B. O'Connell fell out and stout belligerent cops awoke from slumber.

What really happened nobody will ever know, because the police department moves in a mysterious way. Some of the brothers of the combatants said yesterday that the patrol had just come in, Brady with it, and that Brady, finding O'Connell snoozing in a chair, had tickled his foot. O'Connell, awaking, protested with sleepy wrath. The kind word led to another. In and out one man was worsted. A trial at arms was begun and Patrolman Brady at the desk murmured:

Meantime a voice cried: Sleep no more. Some one told me that.

In from the dormitory rushed Patrolman Brady. His face was out and bruised. He told the unhappy Wabbe that O'Connell had assaulted him. O'Connell must be locked up. Wabbe steadied himself and called the skipper. Capt. Reidy tried to mollify Brady with no success at all. So they had to lock O'Connell up on a simple assault charge.

His quarters was notified that Patrolman Brady had been assaulted. The patrolman with Patrolman O'Connell, that the latter had been arrested that Brady had been treated at the Fordham Hospital. In the morning the system began its slow, precise operation. By the time all hands had been called the following day, police court Brady was a free man. He made an affidavit saying that he wouldn't think of charging O'Connell with assault and that he and the imprisoned man had only been slapping each other.

Inspector Flood is interested. He wants to hear about the slapping and is full of eagerness to learn what caused the boys to play. Capt. Reidy will prefer charges against his rollicking boys, though just why he declines to say. Both policemen live in the Bronx. Brady is an honor man.

PEARY RETURNS THANKS.

Suggests to the Chamber of Commerce That the South Pole Remains to Be Found.

The Chamber of Commerce yesterday instructed the president, J. Edward Simmons, to appoint a special committee to consider whether there is need of reestablishing in the chamber a court of arbitration. Resolutions were passed upholding the protest of the coastwise and Hudson River steamship lines against proposed extension over them of the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Commander Robert E. Peary, who was recently elected an honorary member of the chamber, made a brief address in which he thanked the members for the honor and paid tribute to Morris K. Jessup, former president of the chamber, for his aid in his expedition to the North Pole.

It seems, said Commander Peary, that a party from the New York Chamber of Commerce to the north pole. The expedition would seem a most profitable one, and yet the New York Chamber of Commerce is particularly associated with this work. For the first time, the expedition would seem a most profitable one, and yet the New York Chamber of Commerce is particularly associated with this work.

Now that the north pole has been won, it is time to consider the south pole. It is time to consider the south pole. It is time to consider the south pole. It is time to consider the south pole.

THE SHOW FOR CHINESE.

Variety Promised When Americans Reopen Bowers Street Theatre.

The theatre of the Chinese in Bowers street closed for several weeks, has been returned to them and will be reopened on Saturday night under the ownership of Raymond Hitchcock.

The interior of the old theatre has been decorated and cleaned. At the entrance is an American ticket office with a glass window and an electric light inside. The seats and ceiling have been painted red and around the walls are reproductions of historical scenes once played by travelling troupes from China.

The people are wondering to-night what will happen when the trial of the Chinese, Mr. and Mrs. Sin, begins. The trial will begin to-morrow. The trial will begin to-morrow. The trial will begin to-morrow.

MOB TAKES MAN FROM COURT

FEMININE HURL NEGRO THROUGH WINDOW TO DEATH.

Angered at Delay They Kill Then Hang Him Up for Public to View Body Delivered to Authorities Other Prisoners Saved by Sheriff.

DALLAS, Tex., March 3.—During the trial of Allen Brooks, a negro accused of assaulting Mary Ethel Bivens, a white girl two and a half years old, in the Dallas county court house this morning a mob overpowered the officers who guarded the prisoner and threw Brooks out of the second story window.

The negro struck on his head and was killed instantly, but the mob hanged him nevertheless.

The mob made it apparent early that justice or vengeance had to be given without delay.

After an hour of court preliminaries the next hour was employed in feinting and feeling by the lawyers appointed to defend the negro. Then Judge Seay gave them an hour in which to prepare in writing a motion for continuance.

The crowd was stubbornly slow of movement when an order was issued to clear the corridors. Down two broad flights of stairs the fifty or more deputy sheriffs and policemen pressed the angry men from the rural districts. Chairs were stretched across the stairway approaches.

Suddenly a shrill whistle rang through the big building, a hoarse voice shouted "Come on boys," and the "boys" came on.

They rushed at the chains strung in their path and snapped them one after another. They swept deputy sheriffs and policemen on their way to the court room and upset furniture, felled chairs and all heading to the concrete pavement two stories and a half below.

The negro shrieked just once in his flight, but that was all. His head came off his neck and his neck was broken. The mob seized the rope that had been used to hang Brooks and dragged the lifeless body half a mile through Main street to Akard, fastened the rope to a projecting spike in a post that formed a corner of the Elks arch, pulled the body up and for ten minutes exposed it to the view of 10,000 or more people assembled in the streets. Then they cut it down, put it in an express wagon, drove half a block to the City Hall and presented the corpse to the city officials.

The officials a short time later sent it to the morgue. Members of the mob were no masks or made no effort to conceal their identity.

Dallas is quiet to-night and there is no danger of further work by the mob for the reason that there is no available material on which to work. The four other criminals that the mob wanted to lynch were hurried this afternoon out of the Dallas county jail, placed in automobiles and rushed to Fort Worth or Weatherford before the mob that lynched Allen Brooks could make the half mile journey on foot from the Elks arch, at Main and Akard, to the Dallas county jail in Houston street.

More than 3,000 determined men assailed the county jail about 1 o'clock and forced the sheriff to open the gates. They rushed in and seized the prisoners. They rushed in and seized the prisoners. They rushed in and seized the prisoners.

When the mob at the jail became convinced that the jailers would not admit them, they took to the streets. They took to the streets. They took to the streets. They took to the streets.

The jailers then permitted a committee of twenty to search the building. No prisoner desired by the mob could be found. The mob then dispersed.

News from Grand Prairie, Arlington and Fort Worth was received announcing the arrival of the fugitives and their guard at those places. Then about 3:30 P. M. the mob, realizing that they had been fooled, dispersed.

Mayor Hay, seeing the mob spirit that was rampant, ordered the 220 saloons in Dallas closed. They will not be opened until to-morrow.

During the afternoon the local companies of the Texas National Guard were assembled to be ready for service in case of emergency. They were ready for service in case of emergency. They were ready for service in case of emergency.

The people are wondering to-night what will happen when the trial of the Chinese, Mr. and Mrs. Sin, begins. The trial will begin to-morrow. The trial will begin to-morrow. The trial will begin to-morrow.

IF ACTION ON LORDS FAILS

Government Party Will Dissolve, Mr. Asquith Announces.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN. LONDON, March 3.—In reply to a question in the House of Commons to-day as to the details of the Ministry's programme Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister, said the intention of the Government, subject to unforeseen contingencies, was to ask the House to dispose of the budget as soon as the resolutions in regard to the House of Lords had been passed through the Commons.

In answer to another question Mr. Asquith announced that the Government's intention was to get the proposals in regard to the veto power of the House of Lords on the statute book in the shape of an act of Parliament at the earliest possible moment. The Premier declared that unless the Government found themselves in a position that would insure that their proposals would not merely pass the House of Commons but that they could be passed into law they (the Government) would not continue in office.

Continuing his statement the Premier said: "It is intended to embody these proposals in a bill to be introduced in the House of Commons to-day. The bill will be introduced in the House of Commons to-day. The bill will be introduced in the House of Commons to-day."

Replying to a question of Prof. Butler, Unionist member for Cambridge University, Mr. Asquith admitted that he had informed the House on Monday last that the only change in procedure from that originally announced by the Government was that the resolutions in regard to the veto power would be submitted to the House of Lords. The Premier confirmed that statement adding, however: "But at the same time I myself and the Chancellor of the Exchequer said that in certain circumstances we did not intend to ask this House to repeat the process which has been described in days bygone as ploughing the sands."

In the House of Lords this afternoon Lord Lansdowne, the Unionist leader in that body, announced that he and his followers would not oppose the passage in the Lords on March 7 of the two money bills now before the House of Commons. But in regard to the Treasury temporary borrowing bill Lord Lansdowne said they would call attention to the Government's delay in meeting the financial needs of the current year.

DEBATE OF BRUSSELS DEPUTIES ON SHORTAGE.

Large Sums Lost From Congo Treasury and Not Accounted For in the Crown Funds—Talk That Some Must Have Gone to Baroness Vaughan's Support.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN. BRUSSELS, March 3.—The fortune of the late King Leopold was a topic of discussion for hours in the Chamber of Deputies to-day. The dead King, as well as the Government, came in for sharp criticism. Interest chiefly centered in an interpellation submitted by M. Van der Velde, Socialist, who wanted to know what claim Belgium had on the several corporations founded by Leopold and endowed by him with vast sums.

M. Van der Velde recalled that Leopold had said his fortune amounted to 15,000,000 francs, but after his death the newspapers said 70,000,000 francs had been found in companies and foundations directed by men of straw. 25,000,000 francs of this amount being in the Congo bonds. Nobody could tell what had happened to the accounts of the Congo State and the Congo domain were examined, but the books had been burned. It was thus impossible to know what the King did for Belgium and for the family of Baroness Vaughan but anyway the money he amassed smelled of blood.

His fortune ought to revert to the Congo State for the improvement of the lot of those Congolese who were not killed in Leopold's regime. The political responsibility for the companies endowed by the King and his tools who carried on the Congo State with the Government, M. De Lathauwer, Minister of Justice, admitted that Congo bonds had been found among the appurtenances of royal foundations, and he thought these ought to be transferred to the State.

M. Renkin, Minister of the Colonies, said he regretted he had earlier mistakenly said that the Congo had refunded to the Crown foundations a certain amount received from the latter. His declaration had been made in all sincerity, but since he had discovered it was an error.

"The King deceived you," cried M. van der Velde, and the Minister by an evasive reply admitted the fact.

M. Janssens, the Liberal leader, said that 20,000,000 francs had disappeared from the Congo treasury and he asked where it had gone. He also asked if it had furnished the extraordinary luxuries at Ballincourt, the residence of Baroness Vaughan.

He made charges of illegality in connection with certain endowments and said that he was amazed that the highest Magistrates in the country were concerned in violating the nation's laws.

The debate convinced the Socialists that Leopold took 8,000,000 francs which he had to Belgium from the Congo domain and added the amount to his private fortune.

FREEDOM OF LONDON FOR T. R.

He'll Get It in a Gold Box in the Guildhall, if He Wants.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN. LONDON, March 3.—At a meeting to-day of the Court of Common Council of London a resolution to the effect that the freedom of the city should be presented to Col. Theodore Roosevelt in recognition of the distinguished manner in which he had filled the office of President of the United States and of the eminent services which he had rendered in the cause of liberty and in promoting amicable relations with foreign nations was carried by acclamation. It is planned to have the document conferring the honor presented to Col. Roosevelt in a gold box.

The resolution also expressed the hope that Col. Roosevelt would accept the presentation of the freedom of the city and would receive the gold box in the Guildhall.

Alkerman Sir H. E. Knight, a member of the Council for Cripplegate Without, and also for Cripplegate Without, in seconding the resolution said that the Council desired not only to honor the former head of a great and powerful nation but also to express the feeling of will and friendliness between the English speaking peoples of the world.

OBJECT TO AMERICAN REPORT.

German Reichstag Discusses Morality of Ocean Liners.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN. BERLIN, March 3.—The American official report on the immorality and ill treatment of women on the Atlantic liners was criticized in the Reichstag to-day by a representative of the Ministry of the Interior, who, replying to a question, said he was of the opinion that the offending lines caused great indignation among German ship owners and sailors and among those of other countries.

He added that in view of the "heavily asserted" contained in the report it was most regrettable that the lines were not identified. He declared that an unsigned complaint had been received in reference to German ships. The Government gladly took the opportunity of saying that the charges did not affect them.

HANDS OFF IN TIBET.

England Will Observe Treaty Obligations and Make Others Too Likewise.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN. LONDON, March 3.—In answer to a question in the House of Commons this afternoon Edwin Samuel Montagu, Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister, referring to the occupation of Lhasa by the Chinese and the flight of the Dalai Lama said there was no reason to suppose that the relations between India and Tibet would be affected by recent events.

The policy of the British Government, Mr. Montagu said, would be to observe strictly its treaty obligations and to require other countries interested in Tibet to take similar action.

PARIS GAY IN MID-VEIL.

Celebration Makes Up for Carnival Stopped by Floods.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN. PARIS, March 3.—The Parisians, having been deprived of their carnival owing to the floods, threw themselves with untold enthusiasm into the mid-veiled festival to-day. Bright sunshine after the prolonged rains and the knowledge that the Seine was falling again were additional inducements to merrymaking. Tons of confetti were thrown. The mad fun is going on along the boulevards to-night and will last until morning. Traffic was stopped, but it would not have had a chance of moving anyway. A parade procession of thirty companies of 1,000 musicians and 1,500 figurants toured the streets for five hours.
